HISTORY.

IN the autumn of 1865 Mr. O. R. Burchard came to Raleigh, under the auspices of the American Union Commission, and opened a school for white children, which was named the Washington School. The Commission discontinued its work the next year, and the American Missionary Association consented to open a school in the same building under the same name. The old scholars were invited back, but it was expressly said that colored children would be equally welcome. For a few days the two races attended together, sitting in separate rooms for study, but reciting on the same benches. The number of colored children increased, and the white children were laughed away from the school. One eager girl kept on alone for some weeks, but finally yielded to the pressure. The school became known as a colored school, and the Freedmen's Bureau erected for it the large building which was first occupied in January, 1868.

In January, 1869, this house was rented to the State of North Carolina for the use of her colored deaf and dumb and blind children.

On an adjacent lot, the gift of Prof. Fisk P. Brewer, the Freedmen's Bureau erected the smaller building which was occupied by the Washington School until the autumn of 1874, when the school returned to the larger building, and the First Congregational Church of Raleigh took possession of the smaller edifice.

This church was organized during the summer of 1874 by Rev. Wm. G. Marts, a missionary of the American Missionary Association, who acted as pastor of the church till February, 1876, when he was transferred to Talladega, Alabama.

A Sunday-school has always been maintained by the teachers of the week-day school. In this they have been greatly assisted by Deacon Henry C. Jones, who has hardly been absent during the past six years. In the summer he is superintendent, and at all times a teacher of the Bible-school. On many Sabbaths the attendance is over two hundred. Mrs. Col. A. W. Shaffer has charge of the Infant Class, and leads the singing in the school.
